DEFINITION OF CLASS:
This is the senior full performance level professional investment analyst work involving the direction and oversight of investments for the Employees’ Retirement System and the Retiree Health Benefits Trust. It is a fully functioning professional class performing a wide variety of financial work and complex investment offerings within both the public and private markets. Employees in the class provide support and make recommendations to Investment Officers relative to investment opportunities for the Trust Funds. The work involves definition, analysis, evaluation and presentation of highly significant and complex investment issues and options. Investment sectors that may be directed, as assigned, include: Public Equities (domestic and international), Currencies, Private Equity and Private Real Estate, TIPS and Commodities, Natural Resources, Derivatives, and Hedge Funds. Contacts include high-level County and external officials such as the Board of Investment Trustees, economists, investment consultants, insurance managers, State officials, banking officials, officials of County-funded agencies, tax consultants, auditors, accountants, attorneys, underwriters, claims adjusters, and County Council representatives. Purposes of these contacts include convincing, persuading, and negotiating while providing subject-matter advice, solving complex problems and agreeing on courses of action. This class of work may entail some public service/assistance, but it is incidental to the primary focus of the work performed.

An employee in this class is responsible for planning and carrying out assignments independently and resolving most conflicts which arise. Employees work under minimal supervision and have full technical responsibility for the work and its manner and level of performance and presentation of data. Work is reviewed by the Executive Director and the Board of Investment Trustees for effectiveness in meeting the Board’s objectives. Work products are accepted as technically authoritative. Guidelines exist in the form of the County Charter, Federal and State investment, tax, insurance, and other laws, opinions of the County Attorney, asset classes, percentage allocations, plan documents and accepted financial and/or investment principles and accounting standards. The employee must apply these guidelines to the current situation with extensive analysis required.

Complexity of the work revolves around the requirement to conduct complex technical analyses; e.g., to identify underperforming investments, new investment opportunities, and risk/return, taking into account the dynamic and frequently changing capital market environment with the overarching objective of formulating appropriate and effective responses. Complexity is also seen in the presence of new, special, or frequently-changing environment of investment portfolio management and requirements, rules and regulations for which an employee in this class must interpret and apply. This may require the employee to develop new procedures or revise existing ones. Complexity is also seen in the presence of new, special, or frequently-changing requirements for which the employee interprets and applies new rules and regulations and may be required to develop and/or revise procedures. The scope and effect of the work have a direct, pivotal impact on: the County’s ability to fund the obligations of the Employees’ Retirement System within reasonable cost levels by earning the highest return levels while managing the risk; obtaining and providing the most advantageous products to participants in the defined contribution plans; and thousands of County government employees and retirees as well as County taxpayers. The work is primarily sedentary, performed in a typical office setting and presents no hazards to the employee.
